Berg Bay Private Inholding Notification to Visitors

Glacier Bay visitors are advised that two privately owned inholdings (Native Allotments) in Berg Bay have been posted "Private Property/No Trespassing." The posted private property is located on both the north and south banks of the Berg Bay North River, as shown on the following map. Access to surrounding park lands, located ½ mile to the south and several hundred feet to the east of the existing signs, remains open, including lands below the line of mean high tide, now marked by survey stakes and boundary markers in the vicinity of the river. Visitors are advised that the banks of Berg Bay North River, including such popular fishing spots as 'The Glory Hole', are located entirely on private property. The only people authorized to be on the property are representatives of the State of Alaska and Department of Interior officials on government business, and NPS law enforcement rangers. Others must obtain landowner permission by contacting the Hoonah Indian Association (907-945-3545). As a reminder, freshwater guided sport fishing is not authorized in this area.
